

FOUND GUILTY.

Wilson Convicted of Fleming's Murder.

He Takes the Result Very Bravely.

The Jury Deliberated for Six Hours Before They Were Able to Agree on a Verdict.

The agony is over, and the death penalty hangs over Jefferson Wilson, colored, private in Troop K, Tenth Cavalry, U. S. A.

Testimony in the trial of Wilson for murdering William Fleming, last August, at San Carlos, closed in the District Court this morning, and counsel immediately began their summing up.

It should be remarked just here that United States District Attorney Jeffords' case nearly collapsed under the examination of one of his main witnesses. But the District Attorney had, apparently, a strong case. So, when Private Varnum went upon the stand and denied all knowledge, practically, of Fleming's murder, the trained lawyer showed no sign of chagrin or discomfort. He had Varnum's testimony on a former occasion, signed in his own handwriting, to the effect that he was an eye witness to the decaying of Fleming, and actually saw his head cracked with the deadly iron bar. It required nerve to encounter the dissipation of such vital evidence, in the very crisis of the case. Not the shade of faintest shadow stole across the prosecutor's immovable countenance as Varnum deliberately swallowed his previous deposition and swore to total ignorance of the affair. Coolly and carefully the case went on, as though no ripple had disturbed its agitated surface.

Counselors Rouse and Lovell plead long and earnestly for their client.

Counselor Jeffords' speech was generally commended for its force of argument and delivery, its fairness and the completeness with which every circumstance, name and date was presented. About 2:45 p. m., Judge Kibby began his charge, explaining at length the law governing such cases and dwelling upon the rules of evidence to be followed in arriving at a verdict.

The clock pointed to 3:30 when the jury retired. The crowds, which since Tuesday morning have eagerly crowded the Court room, dispersed; some scattering about town, others in little groups about the hallways and lobbies, speculating with that nervous excitement which ever surrounds a human life in jeopardy.

As 5 o'clock struck an ominous knock on the jurors' door was heard. They filed into the court room again. The instructions bothered some of them and Judge Kibby patiently repeated them. When 6:30 rolled by without a verdict, the arbiters of Wilson's destiny were taken down to the Mills House and fortified for further duty by a substantial dinner. It seemed to aid them for, at 8:15 p. m., a second knock announced the reaching of a unanimity, as required by law.

"Gentlemen, have you agreed upon your verdict?" solemnly asked Judge Kibby. The foreman nodded and then these fatal words were pronounced: "Guilty as charged in the indictment."

The jury were discharged, and one week from Wednesday next, June 11th, was fixed as the day for sentence.

It is hinted that there were from fourteen to sixteen ballots taken, and that the first count showed nine to three for conviction. Of course, such reports cannot be verified, as the secrets of the jury room were carefully guarded.

As in many another great case, the turning point, probably, was a simple one. Two shirts figured largely in the trial. Gray shirts they were, worn and unadorned. After the murder, something induced Uncle Sam's officers to tear down the hut or shack where Wilson slept, six days after the murder.

There, between the rude wainscoting of wood and outer canvas covering, was found a gray flannel shirt, tightly wedged in, with a tell-tale blot of blood on one side.

Did Jefferson Wilson watch this damning discovery? If not, why did he so promptly offer another gray shirt, very similar, and insist it was the one he wore when Wm. Fleming was so brutally brained? Possibly this very readiness to thrust proof upon his trailers, while as yet they had not faced him with the charge now established in the decisive tribunal. He who exonerated himself, accuses, the French say. Perhaps Jefferson Wilson was his own most dangerous accuser. At all events, when the verdict was given, he assumed a look of surly defiance, as though he'd braved a hundred verdicts without a tremor. It was plain, though, that behind all this bravado, a crushed and broken hope sank down into the depths of fathomless despair.

The other cases for murder and conspiracy against Edwards, Douglas, Logan and Varnum go over till next November. The large array of officers and soldiers from San Carlos will probably return on Saturday.

TRIALS SET.

The case of the Territory vs. Pool, was set for the second Monday in June.

Territory vs. Govro, second Wednesday in June.

Territory vs. Salazar and Jans, second Thursday in June. Defendants all plead not guilty.

The court thereupon adjourned until the second Monday in June.

Many changes and improvements will be asked by the fire boys of the City Council soon. The hose, they say, will positively have to be renewed. The city owns some 900 feet of cotton, rubber-lined, three-inch pipe, that has been here since the organization of the department, and has long since passed its date of usefulness. It leaks so badly that it is practically useless. A drain tower at the engine house, for the purpose of lifting the hose after use to clear it of water, is also needed and will, no doubt, be erected.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

A renewed commission as notary public was yesterday issued by Secretary Murphy for Probate Judge Frank Baxter.

Probate Judge Baxter was engaged in taking testimony in the District Court case of M. Aldridge et. al. vs. Frank Murphy et. al.

Charlie Besse yesterday before Judge Kibby, renounced all allegiance to the German Empire and secured the final papers that make him a complete citizen.

The Commercial Hotel and the Investment Bank have been struck by the wave of improvement, and the fronts of each are being bordered by plank sidewalks twelve feet in width.

Mr. D. H. Recarte received his commission as special census enumerator for collecting live stock statistics for Arizona and Southern California. He will begin his work June 1.

The Bee Hive store will not open this forenoon on account of the funeral of Mrs. E. H. Winter's little son Stanley, who will be buried this morning at 10 o'clock in the family burying ground at Ripley, Ohio.

The new City Council will hold a regular session next Monday, when a City Recorder, a City Zanjero and other minor officers will be chosen. There are quite a number of candidates for the first mentioned place.

It is expected by Judge D. H. Wallace that the delayed land office receipts, involved by the defalcation of Fred W. Smith, the late Democratic receiver at the Tucson land office, will begin to make their appearance in a few days.

Police court business was very quiet yesterday. Marshal Blankenship found not a solitary drunk and disorderly or other law infringer, and the chain gang still stays with a roster of but two—both of those, by the way, born tired and playing sick, in preference to donating their lives to the improvement of the streets.

Judgment having been secured in the District Court against the names upon the delinquent tax roll of Maricopa county, notice will probably be published on Monday of the new date set for the sale of the property upon which taxes remain unpaid. The sum total of delinquency is about $10,000. The last day of grace will probably be during the last week of June.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. Ben Goldman, A. J. Halbert and George R. Nichols have been representing Tempe in Phoenix for a few days past.

Attorney-General Churchill leaves today for Prescott to attend the session of the Supreme Court, which meets in adjourned term next Monday.

M. M. Jackson is in from Buckeye and informs the REPUBLICAN that his section still slumbers peacefully, undisturbed by any work upon the big canal.

Professor March, lately of the Harvard Military school, of Los Angeles, is in Phoenix, seeking relief for bronchial troubles in the balmy air of the Salt River valley.

Yesterday morning's Black Canyon stage brought from the north Mr. B. F. Murphy, father of Secretary N. O. Murphy. Mr. Murphy, Sr., is in Arizona looking after his two sons, Superintendent Frank Murphy, of Prescott, and the Secretary. Mr. Murphy is now a resident of Guernville, Sonoma county, Cal. He bears his 71 years in a manner that would be creditable to twenty years less, and has borne the fatigues of his journey remarkably well. He is charmed with the Salt River valley and believes that Phoenix is destined to be the principal city of the southwest.

[New York Tribune.]

President Harrison has a peculiar aversion to having his photograph taken or his portrait drawn. A number of efforts have been made to persuade him to sit for a picture amid the surroundings in which he is daily found in the White House, but they have proved of no avail.

He sat for some pictures to the regular Washington photographers when he came here first, but lately he has refused to give any sittings. Postmaster-General Vannaman is equally averse to being photographed.

The other members of the Cabinet are not so backward about having greatness thrust upon them.
